- ❖ 318 pages, 6” x 9” trade paperback and e-book

Lisa M. Green is a high school English and Special Education teacher.

In this debut novel of mythic and paranormal fantasy, everyone and everything is dying, slowly and without hope of salvation.

Something is out there. And the people live in constant fear. Yet their biggest threat lies within their own village. In a world where almost nothing is truth and isolation is the purest form of self-deception, the possibility of hope exists only in the heart and mind of a young woman who chooses to follow an unknown path in order to save everyone she knows and loves. Before long, she discovers that her most vital beliefs are based on a deception that will rock the foundation of her entire people. To save them, she must learn to open her heart and sacrifice...everything. You may think you have heard this story before, but be warned. You haven't.

Set in an extraordinarily unique realm, this fast-paced narrative takes readers on an enigmatic adventure, captivating audiences from the very first page until the book's shocking climax blindsides their preconceptions.
